

RadioFrequency Microneedling Aftercare

POST-TREATMENT GUIDELINES

- There will be some discomfort and a warm sensation in the treated area for 24hours following treatment.
- Swelling and redness will occur and usually subsides after 48hours. It is quite normal for mild sensitivity and redness after treatment. The skin may resemble moderate sunburn, as the skin naturally heals the redness will resolve. The skin may remain red for three to four days after treatment, although it is usual for it to subside within two days and many people are able to return to their normal activities the same day.
- Do not use any perfume, perfumed cosmetics or skincare products, or any fragranced products including the use of Glycolic and AHA's for 3 days post treatment.
- If you experience any adverse reactions that appear to be attributable to the use of the home care products, you must discontinue use of them
- Hands should be thoroughly washed or sanitized before touching the treated skin area or applying skincare products to the area, immediately after and in the first two days after the procedure.
- Dryness and flakiness will occur and can possibly scab. This can last for up to 7 days post-procedure.
- The skin will look dry for a few days and we recommend the use of the Aloe Vera gel.
- All facial skin procedures, excluding injection based treatments, should be avoided for 1 month after treatment.
- Direct sun exposure and tanning bed use is strictly prohibited. Sun protection of at least SPF 30 must be used at all times even when it is overcast or raining. If you fail to protect your skin from sun exposure, you will be at risk of uneven pigmentation and sunburn.
- Use of saunas and any heat treatments are not recommended for a period of at least 2 weeks after the procedure.
- Make up should not be worn for 24 hours post-procedure and then we recommend using mineral makeup thereafter.
- For long term protection, increased skin barrier repair and to enhance the treatment outcomes, we advise regular use of SPF 30.

IT IS VITAL THAT YOU FOLLOW YOUR COURSE AND INSTRUCTIONS AS RECOMMENDED.
